Long Island Sound

On the 1st of August 1861, the U.S.S. Albatross, under the command of Lieutenant John Rodgers, was ordered to cruise in the Long Island Sound, and to observe the movements of the British fleet, which was expected to appear in the vicinity of New York.
The Albatross was sailed on the 1st of August, and on the 3rd of the same month, she was sighted by the British fleet, which was then in the vicinity of
New York. The Albatross was followed by the British fleet for several days, and on the 7th of August, she was sighted by the British fleet, which was then in the vicinity of New York.

FIRST OF JUNE---PANORAMA.

LEICESTER-SQUARE.

THE Public are respectfully informed, that the PANORAMA opens every day at Ten o'clock, with a Representation of every Ship in the British and French Fleets, as they appeared at One P. M. on that day. Captain Barlow, of the Pegasus, Lord Howe's repeating Frigate, and Captain Seymour, who was Signal Officer with Captain Barlow at that time, having obligingly furnished Mr. Barker with a correct Plan of the situation of every ship, taken the first moment that they could be discovered from smoke, when the French Fleet had fled from the English, and forming on the starboard tack, had commenced, as they passed, a heavy fire on the Queen, from nine sail of their line.

Observers may suppose themselves on the open sea, in the centre of both fleets, and so near the Queen Charlotte, as to afford an advantageous View of one of the finest Ships in the Navy.

This Scene will continue open, as usual, in the Panorama. Likewise the New View of London, highly finished in Oil Colours.

Admittance One Shilling.

There is a great deal of work to be done in the country, and it is not easy to find men to do it.

The country is very fertile,
and the soil is very good.
The climate is very warm,
and the weather is very fine.

The people are very friendly,
and they are very kind.
The food is very good,
and the drink is very fine.

The country is very large,
and it is very beautiful.
The mountains are very high,
and the rivers are very deep.

The people are very brave,
and they are very strong.
The horses are very fast,
and the dogs are very good.

The country is very rich,
and it is very fertile.
The soil is very good,
and the climate is very warm.

The people are very happy,
and they are very kind.
The food is very good,
and the drink is very fine.
